On the 50th anniversary of its publication, Woodward's The Burden of Southern History will be the focus of this retrospective. Woodward tackles questions of equality, white southern identity, the political legacy of Reconstruction, the heritage of populism, the place of the South within the nation, among others. Over the course of two days, invited scholars will meet in working sessions where they will be asked to reconsider the key essays that comprise Woodward's landmark collection, to discuss the ongoing relevance of his ideas, or to reinterpret one of his theses in an analysis of the contemporary South. The end result will be a manuscript that will reflect the findings made through their collective work. Please call 501.727.6219 for more details.
